Good morning I.S.201! This is Grace Zhang from class 832, here with you on behalf of the S.E.A.L. Team.

Respecting all people, no matter where they come from, is important because it helps create a more positive and accepting environment. People around the world have different cultures, languages, traditions, and beliefs, but these differences should be appreciated rather than judged or made fun of. Everyone deserves to be treated with the same kindness and respect that others do. When we take the time to learn about other people's backgrounds, we become more approachable and understanding. In today's world, people from many different backgrounds meet each other every day at school and in their communities. Respecting others helps create a place where everyone feels comfortable being themselves. It also encourages people to work together and overcome challenges as a team. By treating others with respect, we can build trust, strengthen relationships, and make our school more welcoming for everyone.

Like Anne Frank, the affirmation of the day is, “Respect all people, no matter where they come from.”

Thanks for listening and have a Fair Friday 😊
